MASSACRE SCENE IN ASHES OF VENGEANCE FINE

Four hundred horses and armed riders were used in the set reproducing medieval Paris for Norma Talmadge's spectacular historic romance "Ashes of Vengeance," a First National picture being presented at the Elite Theatre on Monday and Tuesday next (These scenes, in which hired foreign troops were sent through the streets of Paris by Charles IX to run down and slay those whom he believed to be his enemies, were reproduced with the greatest realism under Lloyd's direction.

A number of extras were hurt when the horses came galloping through the streets, trampling the bodies of those stricken down by their riders. However, there were no very serious mishaps A whole quarter of 16th century Paris was built, under supervision of Stephen Goosson, famous screen architect for these scenes.

"Ashes of Vengeance" is a Joseph M. Schenck production, directed by Frank Lloyd.

In the cast, besides Noma Talmadge are Conway Tearle, Wallace Beery, Courtenay Foote Josephine Crowell, Betty Francisco, Claire McDowell, Andre de Beranger, Murdock MacQuarrie, Boyd Irwin, Carmen Phillips Winter Hall, William Clifford, Hector V. Sarno, Earl Schenck, Lucy Beaumont, Forrest Robinson, Mary McAllister, Kenneth Gibson, Howard Truesdell Frank Leigh and little Jeanne Carpenter.

The story of "Ashes of Vengeance" is laid in the time of Charles IX of France. Forty-eight massive sets, including one 330 feet long, re-producing the Louvre Palace ballroom, and another showing an entire section of Paris in 1712 were built for this production.

TREES PROVE REAL PREMIUM ON THE FARM

When it comes to values there is nothing that puts a premium on a prairie farm like trees. The soil may not be any better than on any other farm in the neighborhood yield no more per acre and it may not be in any better condition in regard to weeds. The buildings may not be any better, may even be a good deal poorer in construction and look a great deal worse but if treed the farm takes on such an appearance that any purchaser is willing to pay the premium

The reason is not far to seek for as soon as the stranger rests his eyes on the treed place it becomes a feature farm to him right away. The trees are a landmark he cannot escape and the farm that possesses them becomes desirable in his eyes because of the sheer contrast between it and the treeless places around. He is looking for a place not only to make a living on but to live at. There is a vast difference between living and just making a living and when he sees the well sheltered house and farm buildings, attractive to look at and with no end of possibilities for comfort, shade and garden and orchard, he is satisfied to buy in preference to the treeless place and willing to play a better price. At another place, no doubt, he could start in and grow what trees he required but he thinks of long years it would take and of his family growing up and of what they would gain by reason of the trees being already there. He sees himself practically ten or fifteen years ahead in his home-making and because of the trees closes the deal.

There is no doubt about it; trees make difference in values. Not only to the individual, But to the entire neighborhood, for if one place in a district can grow trees it advertises the fact that the other places can also if the owners want to. Trees make a difference and there is nothing else makes just such a difference. Fine houses don't do it. Neither do big barns, straight furrows or good fences, or even fine cattle. These are all important and very desirable, but they don't make a place conspicuous and desirable from a distance like trees. They can, and always will, carry the impression of a complete cozy home with all that it means to the contentment and happiness of the people living on the farm.

INDEMNITIES REDUCTION IS VOTED DOWN

EDMONTON,—The Davidson bill asking for a reduction of the indemnities of the members of the legislature was voted out after a motion for withdrawal had been made by the mover on a division forced by the opposition The vote was 34 to 6.

The motion was made to the house at 11 p.m., when several members had left for the day. After considering estimates for some hours, the house at the suggestion of the premier reverted back to the orders of the day to give second readings to a number of bills

In spite of strong protest from the Hon. Chas Mitchell, leader of the opposition, for further consideration of the bill, the house declined to hold up the motion There were only six liberal members in the house at the time the vote was taken.

Oil Companies All Preparing For Coming Season's Work

The season's activities in the oil-field, and the necessary work pertaining to the commencement of again getting "under weight", are now looming up prominently around the district During the past two weeks several strangers from the oilfields of California and Texas have been 'spying out the ground" and although non of them have committed themselves to statements for publication it is the general feeling among them that Wainwright Oilfields has "arrived" and that in all probability the district will see a real boom this year.

Work has started at the holdings of the Maple Leaf Company at Fabyan and with two crews working things are sure "going some" under direction of Managing-directorr Roy Williams who is on the job night and day. At the end of last week the two carload shown here arrived for his company and with everything going smoothly it is hoped to have the big rotary turning by Friday or Saturday.

It is the intention of Drillers Batt and Steel, both of whom are old-at the oil game to at once set the tubing in the No. 1 well, and they express themselves as fully confident that once this work is completed the field will be fully proved by the results obtained.

In an interview with Mr Williams that gentleman stated "we have no doubts as to the final test of the No. 1 well, because the oil is there, and we intend to get it. Driller Steel and Batt are both very optimistic about the location, and say that the well should prove to be a big producer; in addition to the fact that right at the present time the hole is a big asset to the company in casing head gas. This is now flowing steadily at over ten million feet, and is good for one gallon of gasoline for every thousand feet of the gas according to Driller Steel, and both drillers are convinced that this well will prove this portion of the field without a doubt. They expect to bring in a real big well at any time soon after the tubing is set."

The crew have all now arrived for the work at the Western Consolidated holdings north of town, and according to "Davie" Credille, things will soon be going ahead in fine shape. It is likely that by the week end this company will have things so shaped that actual drilling will be on the go, with the big bit pounding away down to desired level for the oil which it is felt is awaiting release.

So far as the Dome and the Interior companies are concerned, we under stand that both these concerns are making necessary arrangements for the season's work, and with regard to the latter company, we believe it to be their intention to "carry on" at the old Wainwright Producer's hole on the edge of town within the next two weeks, when in all probability it will not be long before something of interest should be forthcoming.

Work is now rapidly forging ahead at the different B. P. sites and according to an interview with Mr Tom Sugars, the field manager of the company, and published in the Edmonton Journal, "oil indications have been met in No. 3 B.P. at Wainwright and preliminary reports indicate that the sands are the best yet tapped in that field"

Mr Sugars stated that the new oil sand is by far the best yet found in the Wainwright field. Experimental tests show that the oil content of the sands will likely run 25 per cent. as compared with 15.4 in No. 4 B.P. well that was brought in as a producer last year.

Expert opinion on the value of the sands will be obtained before an official test is made. The depth of the casing and bring in the well as a producer. What will happen then is a question, however, as the hole has only got 6 1-4 inch casing in it at the present time. On the first test 8 1-4 inch had been used. In view of the small hole and possibly a lack of gas pressure, it may be difficult to bring in the well, however.

It is the intention, however, states Mr Sugars to drill another hole within a few feet of the present one if the well fails to produce at the present point. The company's confidence in this well is shown by the fact that it will drill close at hand and not a half-mile or a quarter of a mile away.

C.N.R. fuel tests of Wainwright crude oil were found to be satisfactory, according to definite word received by Mr Sugars. Negotiations as to supplying the product are now being carried on and full information regarding the matter will be given out when final arrangements are made.

NOW AT WORK AT MAPLE LEAF WELLS

The above twocarloads of machinery which consists of two complete well drilling outfits (a rotary rig and a standard rig) arrived at Fabyan siding last week and are now unloaded. The rotary machine is being rapidly prepared to finish the No 1 well. It is expected to be turning at the end of the week.

WAIN. GOLF CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS FOR COMING YEAR

A well-attended meeting of the habitues of the brassie and niblick was held on Thursday evening of last week and as a result the Wainwright Golf Club was re-organised for the coming season with the following officers:—

Patrons—Mr and Mrs E. Cork.
President—Dr H. Coursier
Vice-pres.—Mrs H. Western

In addition to the above list of officers, an executive committee and a grounds committee were appointed and both of these bodies are now at work to make the club the success it is desired it shall be.

EIGHTY-THREE OIL COMPANIES NOW ON ALBERTA REGISTER

EDMONTON,—At the present time there are 83 oil companies incorporated under Alberta laws, on the company register of the provincial secretary in Edmonton. A great number of these are old companies organized during the boom days of 1914 which have kept themselves in existence by making the regular annual reports required by the province and paying the corporation tax. But they cannot proceed to sell stock again without first obtaining a new certificate from the Alberta Public Utilities Board. A considerable percentage of the 83 existing companies were organized since the 1914 oil boom and have already had their operations scrutinized by the publicy uility board.

Of the huge number of oil companies which mushroomed into existence in the 1914 oil boom, more than 600 have been cancelled and wiped off the provincial company register. The 83 companies in the list, which are in position to do business if approved of by the public utility board, of course do not include such as the Royalite in the Black Diamond field, and the British Petroleum Company in the Wainwright field, organized under Dominion laws and charter.

MARY PICKFORD SELLS FILM PLAY RIGHT TO CHAS. RAY

When Mary Pickford sold Charles Ray the screen rights to "A Tailor Made Man," a United Artists Corporation release to be seen next Friday and Saturday at the theatre, it was the first time in screen history that one star had sold another a story.

But then, as Miss Pickford's husband, Douglas Fairbanks put it, United Artists must always remember the fact that we are really united to foster a higher art expression in the photoplay."

Oddly enough, Charles Ray had always wanted to portray "A Tailor Made Man," and several times, before the play passed into Miss Pickford's hands, had negotiated for its purchase. But always there was some stumbling block.

As soon as he signed with United Artists, however, thereby affiliating with the organization in whose exclusive ranks are Miss Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and D. W. Griffith, Miss Pickford at once offered him the play.

This was a rare stroke of fortune, a huge psychological advantage to the elated Ray, who had been exceedingly desirous of securing for his first United Artists' vehicle a story that would enlist his entire enthusiasm.

The spirit of co-operation as exemplified by Miss Pickford is ample proof of the fact that "United Artists" is not a misnomer, that these superior artists of the cinema are banded together in the cause of bigger, better productions, far above and beyond the level of the "program" picure.

We learn that the winner of the $10 bill given by Mr Dunsmore for the title to his new play is Miss M. Reid, of Trafalgar, and we take pleasure in offering congratulations to the lucky lady on her success. Her ticket number was 129, and the necessary stub has been forwarded to Mr Dunsmore

EXPECTING MINES IN EAST RE-OPEN

HALIFAX, N.S., —Despite the absence of official confirmation, the belief persists that the reopening of the Novia Scotia coal mines, closed down four weeks ago, when the British Empire Steel Corporation refused to meet the demands of its 12,000 miners for restoration of credit at the company's stores and the operation of three idle mines on a minimum basis of four days a week is only a matter of days

Premier Armstrong said last night he was not prepared to make a statemnt, but he could give the assurance that "he was leaving undone nothing than should be done."

Practically the only hindrance at these rates, under an interim contract pending an investigation, it is not believed that this obstacle i s insuperable

GIVE AND TAKE

Newly married couples always decide to be tenderly considerate one to another, but as their rival unselfishness immediately begins to create friction, the husband, with his usual courtesy and foresight, very soon withdraws from the contest and gracefully leaves his wife to a monopoly of unselfish devotion. That is why so many couples get on so splendidly together and it is a fine tribute to the tact and good management, not to mention foresight, of the husband. Theprocess is usually called give and take.—"Mere Man."

MAKING REPAIRS WITH SENSE INSTEAD OF DOLLARS

Out of the bitterness of my own experiences I am prompted to offer the following advice to those of my readers who want maximum efficiency from their automobiles.

Naturally an automobile operates at least expense per mile when it is running in high gear with the spark advanced. Sometimes, however this is not the case. When it is running slowly this condition is a costly one. First because spark is then too early which produces a spark knock. Secondbecause the power impluses are further apart and the action is therefore less even, power being consumed in overcoming the inertia of the flywheel which is very great at an uneven torque.

Many drivers try to stay in high gear and keep the spark lever advanced all the way up the tangent as long as possible in climbing a hill. Under these conditions, when a change has to be made, it is necessary to drop into low gear whereas second gear would have sufficed with a little more momentum. With the engine laboring there is a great strain on all parts and of course, too much gasoline is being wasted in this destructive effort.

Most drivers who do this, think they are economizing on fuel because they figure their engines are turning over fewer times in a giving distance, and hence, less gasoline is being passed in to the engine and burned. That is not so many of them will be surprised to learn for if a change were made into second gear less gasoline would be consumed.

Have you ever watched the expert driver when his car starts to skid? He doesn't jam down his feet on the brake and accelerator. He simply throttles down the engine quickly and turns his front wheels in the direction the car is skiding. The rear wheels, turning so slowly in nine cases out of ten pull his car out of the skid. Then he picks up again and is gone before you realize he even started to skid.

It's mightly hard thing to do, that of keeping your foot away from the brake when a car starts sliding but it must be done or you'll end up in a bad smash. The car starts swaying; the occupants scream; you lose your head-down goes your foot to lock the brakes, then—crash!

You're afraid of skidding and so am I. The way I overcame it on my car was to go out on a rainy night on a wide, quiet street and slide around until I mastered the art. Such an experience was hard on the tires but was well worth while, because when the unexpected came I was prepared.

NO TRAPPING OF MUSKRATS EXCEPT 1ST MARCH TO APRIL 30

The Alberta game regulations will be altered in accordance with a resolution moved in the legislature on Thursday by George Mills, Liberal Athabasca, and seconded by Jos. M. Dechene, Liberal Beaver River.

The resolution reads: Resolved that in the opinion of this house, the minister of agriculture should change the game regulations to prohibit the trapping of muskrats except between March 1 and April 30 in each year.

Mr Mills said that this would prevent winter killing of many rats, by the opening of rat houses, while Mr Decheng pointed out that such a regulation would decide forever, the prime or unprime skins.

The house passed the resolution unanimously.

LOCAL CHURCHES CELEBRATE THE EASTER SEASON

The service at St Andrew's church on Easter Sunday were well attended both morning and evening. In the morning the subject of the address was "The presence of the risen Christ and dwelt with the significance of the resurrection in regard to our every day life. The edifice was tastefully decorated with potted plants to add to the festive appearance.

In the evening "Our resurrection hope" was the topic discoursed by the pastor and a couple of musical numbers were effectively rendered—"As evening shadows fall" by Mrs Carsell and "Hosanna to the Son of David" by Mrs Carsell and Mr J. Harkness. Hearty congregational singing of the old Easter hymns featured both services.

The special Easter service on Sunday evening in Grace church was of a particularly inspiring and uplifting character in keeping with the spirit of the great festival. The beautiful floral decorations of pulpit and altar rail gave an appropriate setting for the service and the very large congregation which crowded the church to the limit of seating capacity entered heartily into the service and listened with rapt attention to song and sermon. The musical programme was of a high order and consisted of an anthem, "The Lord is Risen", very effectively rendered by the choir, Mrs. Telford presiding at the organ; a duet, "Pilgrims of the Night", very sweetly sung by Mrs Western and Mr Stott; a very beautiful solo, "Hosanna" sung in excellent voice by Mrs W. S. Clark and a violin selection, Schubert's "Ave Maria", played by Mrs E. Ganderton and Mr Johnson in a very creditable manner indeed for this number. The subject of the Pastor's address was fully in keeping with the festival.

At St Lukes's church on Sunday al so, suitable High Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Lemaire, and in addition to special music by the choir Mr W. Goulet splendidly rendered "Granier's "Hosanna" with his usual ability

EACH RURAL SCHOOL TEACHER GETS $500 IF BILL PASSES

An additional grant of $500 yearly to each teacher in a rural school; special assistance to schools in pioneer districts, and the possibility of paying rural pupils' fees to high schools were among the benefits to be derived from a change in the system of levying the Educational Tax act, as given in a bill which Hon. Perren Baker, minister of education, moved last week in the Alberta legislature.

Mr Baker informed the house that he did not intend to press the bill at this sitting of the house, but would prefer to leave it in second reading until the adjourned session this year.

Briefly, the bill proposes to levy a flat rate o fthree mills on some $600,000,000 of assessible lands in all rural school districts in the province. From the $1,800,000 thus received, it was proposed to pay a special grant of $500 to each rural district for each teacher employed, in addition to the regular grant.

There would be enough left to provide special assistance to pioneer districts having difficulty in financing, and in addition, the minister hoped to be able to pay high school fees of rural pupils to city high schools

The proposal was received with considerable enthusiasm by the house, the minister urging that the time had come when every ratepayer must recognize his liability to see that education up to grade eight was provded for every child in the province.

CALGARY FIRST STOP IN AERIAL FLIGHT

MONTREAL—Calgary will be a stopping point for the laurentide airplane Viking which will attempt a trans-Canada flight from Vancouver to Montreal in the early autumn.

The airplane will be sent from Three Rivers, Quebec, to Prince Rupers on April 20. After the gold hunt in the north the plane will return to Vancouver, from where the trans-Canada flight will be launched. A non-stop flight from the coast to Calgary will be the first objective. It is understood that Col. J. S. Williams will pilot the Viking in the cross-country journey.

BAREE, SON OF KAZAN

by James Oliver Curwood

A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

"BAREE, SON OF KAZAN," a Vitagraph Picture, With Wolf, the Wan Dog, is an Adaptation of This Story

Copyright, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SYNOPSIS

Baree wandering in the woods, came upon Wakayoo, the black bear, and, fascinated watched him knock fish out of the pool. He learned where Wakayoo cached sih provisions, a discovery that solved the food problem for the young wolf-dog. One day he suddenly found himself face to face with Pierrot, the trapper, and his daughter Nepeese, the Willow, who a few days before had shot and slightly wounded Baree, thinking him a wolf. Nepeese now pursued Baree, who concealed himself beneath a great boulder.

strange tremblings within him.. was it like this that the first woman had looked to Kazan?

Baree stood still. Nepeese was not more than twenty feet from him. She sat on a rock, full in the early morning sun, and was brushing out her wonderful hair. Her lips parted. Her eyes shone in an instant like stars One hand remained poised, weighted with the jet tresses. She recognized him She saw the white star on his breast and the white tip on his ear, and under her breath she whispered "Uch moosis!—"The dog-pup! It was the wild dog she had shot—and thought had died!

The evening before Pierrot and Nepeese had built a shelter of balsams behind the big rock, and on a small white plot of sand Pierrot was kneeling over a fire preparing breakfast to see the little swiftness of her, and that wonderful hair streaming out in the sun. Even now, in this moment's excitement, it made Pierrot think of Me Taggart, the Hudson's Bay Company's factor over at Lac Bain, and what he had said yesterday. Half the night Pierrot hal lain awake, gritting his teeth at the thought of it: and his morning, before Baree ran upon them, he had looked at Nepeese more closely than ever before in his life She was beautiful. She was lovelier even than Wyola, her princess mother who was dead.

"She drew herself out and stood once more in the sunshine."

Floating back to him there came an excited cry.

"Hurry, Nootawe! He has turned into the blind canyon. He cannot escape us now.

She was panting when he came up to her. The French blood in her blood ed a vivid crimson in her cheeks and lips. Her white teeth gleamed like milk.

"In there!" And she pointed.

They went in.

Ahead of them Baree was runing for his life. He sensed instinctively the fact that these wonderful two-legged beings he had looked upon were all powerful. And they were after him! He could hear them. Nepeese was following almost as swiftly as he could run. Suddenly he turned into a cleft between two great rocks. Twenty feet in, his way was barred, and he ran back. When he darted out, straight up the canyon, Nepeese was not a dozen yards behind him, and he saw Pierrot almost at her side. The Willow gave a cry.

"Mana—mana—there he is!"

She caught her breath, and darted into a copse of young balsams when Baree had disappeared. Like a great entangling web her loose hair impeded her in the brush, and with an encouraging cry to Pierrot she stopped to gather it over her shoulder as he ran past her. She lost only a moment or two and was after him. Fifty yards ahead of her Pierrot gave a warning shout. Baree had turned. Almost in the same breath he was tearing over his back-trail, directly toward the Willow. He did not see her in time to stop or swerve aside, and Nepeese flung herself down in his path. For an instant or two they were together. Baree felt the smother of her hair, and the clutch of her hands. Then he squirmed away and darted again toward the blind end of the canyon.

Nepeese sprang to her feet. She was panting—and laughing. Pierrot came back wildly, and the Willow pointed beyond him.

"I had him—and he didn't bite!" she said, breathing swiftly. She still pointed to the end of the canyon, and she said again: "I had him—and he didn't bite me, Nootawe!"

That was the wonder of it. She had been reckless—and Baree had not bitten her! It was then, with her eyes shining at Pierrot, and the smile fading slowly from her lips, that she spoke softly the word "Baree," which in her tongue meant "the wild dog"—a little brother of the wolf.

In and out among the rocks Baree sought swiftly for a way of escape. In a moment more he had come to the "box," or cup of the canyon. This was a break in the wall, fifty or sixty feet wide, which opened into a natural prison about an acre in extent. It was a beautiful spot. On all sides but that leading into the coulee it was shut in by walls of rock. At the far end a waterfall broke down in a series of rippling cascades. The grass was thick underfoot, and strewn with flowers In this trap Pierrot had got more than one fine haunch of venison From it there was no escape, except in the face of his rifle. He called to Nepeese as he saw Barree entering it, and an together climbed the slope.

Baree had almost reached the edge of the little prison-meadow when suddenly he stopped himself so quickly that he fell back on his haunches, and his heart jumped up into his throat.

Full in his path stood Wakayoo, the huge black bear!

Baree darted to one side and ran for the open meadow. Wakayoo did not stir as Baree sped past him—no more than if he had been a bird or rabbit Then came another breath of air heavy with the scent of man. This, at last, put life into him. He turned and began lumbering after Baree into the meadow trap. Baree, looking back saw him coming—and thought it was pursuit, Nepeese and Pierrot came over the slope, and at the same instant they saw both Wakayoo and Baree.

Where they entered into the grassy dip under the rock walls, Baree turned sharply to the right. Here was a great boulder, one end of it tilted up off the earth. It looked like a splendid hiding place, and Baree crawled under it.

But Wakayoo kept straight ahead into the meadow.

From where he lay Baree could see what happened. Scarcely had he crawled under the rock when Nepeese and Pierrot appeared through the break in the dip, and stopped. The fact that the stopped thrilled Baree. They were afraid of Wakayoo! The big bear was two thirds of the way across the meadow. The sun fell on him, so that his coat shone like blackk satin. Pierrot stared at him for a moment. Pierrot did not kill for the love of killing Necessity made him a conservationist But he saw that in spite of the lateness of the season, Wakayoo's coat was splendid—and he raised his rifle.

Baree saw this action. He saw, a moment later, something spit from the end of the gun, and then he heard that deafening crash that had come with his own hurt, when the Willow's bullet had burned through his flesh. He turned his eyes swiftly to Wakayoo The big bear had stumbled; he was on his knees; and then he struggled and lumbered on.

The roar of the rifle came again and a second time Wakayoo went down. Pierrot could not miss at that distance. Wakayoo made a splendid mark. It was slaughter yet for Pierrot and Nepeese it was business—the business of life, Baree was shivering. It was more from excitement than fear, for he had lost his own fear in the tragedy of these moments. A low whine rose in his throat as he looked at Wakayoo, who had risen again and faced his enemies—his jaws gaping his head swinging slowly, his legs weakening under him as the blood poured through his torn lungs. Baree whined—because Wakayoo had fished for him, because he had come too look on him as a friend, and because he knew it was death that Wakayoo was facing now There was a third shot—the last. Wakayoo sank down in his tracks. His big head dropped between his forepaws, A racking cough or two came to Baree. And then there was silence.

CHAPTER VIII

As Nepeese gazed about the rock-walled end of the canyon, the prison into which they had driven Wakayoo and Baree, Pierrot looked up again from his skinning of the big black bear, and he muttered something that no one but himself could have heard "Non, it is not possible," he had said a moment before; but to Nepeese it was possible—the thought that was in

WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA APRIL 15th, 1925

ABOUT MY COUNTRY

"While I am quite prepared to accept with due respect, many, if not all the opinions expressed by those who are called upon to review financial and industrial conditions in Canada for the past year, and to make forecasts for this, I am content to believe the evidence of my own eyes and experience. During the last summer and fall of 1924, I had occasion to make a rather extensive journey from the East to the West and from what I saw and from what I gleaned from statements made to me by those who were in a position to speak with authority I came to the conclusion that the people of the Dominion were as well-fed, well-housed and well-dressed as any other people in the world

"It is a matter of common knowledge that the wheat crop in Western Canada, though showing a yield per acre lower than for several grevious years, realized a much higher price and with the present high levels for grain, livestock and dairy produce, there must be a distinct improvement in the position of the farmer, who has had somewhat difficult conditions to contend with of late and this is bound to reflect favorably on all other activities in Canada.

"It is interesting to note that there has been a marked increase in the sums invested by Americans in Canada, and that no less a sum than 2,750 million dollars has been put into Canadian securities and enterprises. That fact alone shows that there is good reason for an optimistic view for the present year and that there must necessarily follow a very great expansion in a comparatively undeveloped country like ours. Not only in agriculture, but in mining, lumbering and other fields must there be a considerable development, while in manufacturing there will be a steady increase following upon the establishment in the Dominion of branch factories of United States as well as British concerns. When men of the standing of Sir Vincent Meredith and Sir Herbert Holt, the presidents of the Bank of Montreal and the Royal Bank of Canada, financiers of proved worth state that they were never more optimistic in regard to the future of Canada than they are today; one may rest assured that they have good grouds for their opinions.

"I cannot forget that our country has shown wonderful capacity in the past, not fail to believe in the future. It is only necessary to reflect upon the share she took in the Great War her contribution to the effort of the Dominions by placing an armed force of over five hundred thousand men and her advance of over a thousand million dollars to the Treasury here to carry on the struggle. These are facts which remain in the memory and make one convinced that a country possessing such resources must continue to march in the same stride of progress as she has done in the past."

P. C. LARKIN
High Commissioner for Canada

Don't take life too seriously; because no one ever got out of it alive! You might just as well brighten up the home this Spring with a few packages of Muresco and a can or two of Bapco Varnish from the Atlas Lumber Co. phone 57.

GAME COMMISSIONER'S Report

The report of Game Commissioner Lawton shows that his department collected in 1924 $130,276.15 in revenue which provided a surplus of $101,834.56 over the cost of operating the branch. Improved methods of collecting the fur tax brought $35,000 more than in 1923. A total of nearly 20,000 licenses and permits of various kinds were issued during the year.

Women's Extension Service

Miss Jessie MacMillan, Director of Women's Extension Service, reports that short course work among the women's organizations in the province has grown fifty per cent while there has been a decrease in the single demonstration-lecture. There was a total attendance of 11,790 at all short courses, and 945 at demonstration-lectures. Miss MacMillan states that there has been a great appreciation by the women's organizations of the work carried on by the branch.

GOPHER CONTROL

The farmers on the prairies loose thousands of acres of crops each and every year with the gophers. In many case s the losses are in inexcusable when there are such simpde methods of keeping these rodents in check There are districts where farmers organizations hold "gopher days" and other sections where school children are given a holiday and receive some small remuneration for gopher tails. Where this community co-operation exists the loss of crops from gophers is practically nil.

A cooperative method of control is more effective than a little effort on the part of a few, for should one farmer poison the gophers on his own land without his neighbor putting forth a similar effort, only partial results will be obtained.

On the average farm it costs about one cent an acre for poison. The time to apply is early in the spring just as the snow is off the ground and there is shortage of green vegetation The following receipt has been found effective when preparing wheat for poisoning gophers. Under ordinary circumstances it is sufficient to cover a section of land and several hundred yards on the outside of the farm, in order to check the inroads of gophers from adjacent land.

Dissolve 4 ounces of strychine (a deadly poison) in three quarts of water, which is added 1 quart of vinegar Simmer on back of stove for about 12 hours then add water to bring solution to about 1 gallon. Mix this with 50 lb of wheat. If is advisable to use a tub for this purpose and cover it over when mixed. Turn at least three times during the first 24 hours and then it is ready for use. A spoonful of this grain placed at the entrance of gopher holes will be found sufficient unless there are several gophers in the one hole.

ODE TO "MAPLE LEAF NO. 1"

(By John Hurd)

The Maple Leaf, our emblem green
Is the pride of all, where'er it's seen,
And away up at Fabyan, midst rich soil
They're optimistic over Maple Leaf oil!
They think the "Imperial" it will surpass,
For at 1150 feet showed tremendous gas;
But at 1770 'twas most sublime
Though they had to shut her down for a time.
On resuming work they were first in the field,
Feeling real gay at what she would yield;
But what they did see nearly knocked them flat
The most surprised being Driller Ed. Batt!
When we opened the valve,, she gave a great roar,
Shooting out gas; twenty million or more;
It came with a rush, which made them all reel!
And it opened the eyes of Driller H. Steel!
The gas being strong, it is hard to control,
Making it bad for "tubing the hole";
But with a staunch and united crew
They will "get that sand!" There's nothing so true!
Then some of them who stand in clover,
Can thank R. E. W. for putting it over;
For it's his perseverance on the spot
That will put Maple Leaf right over the top!

MOTORING IN SHANGHAI

A friend of mine returned the othe day from Shanghai, China, and th tale of the motoring laws in Shangha may ge interesting to Canadian motorists.

In the first place, traffic runs along the left side of the street, which is the opposite to the American custom

There are so many Chinamen on the streets that one would naturally suppose the law would require the motorist to drive slowly. They may drive as fast as they wish—on the contrary, it is up to the Coolie to get out of the way However, if the motorist happens to bump a high-class Chinaman or a foreigner—woe unto him—for the law takes its full course and for such an offense the motorist will, nine chances out of ten, find himself in jail, and Shanghai jails aren't very nice when one shares them with numerous coolies

Few accessories are used on cars in the Orient, but then the cars are, for the most part not worth dolling up. As long as they run on all four wheels nothing is done to them. When repairing is imperative, only that work is done which is absolutely necessary.

The roads are narrow and constructed of cobblestones, except in a small downtown district. Cars and tires do not last very long there.

The traffic officers are Sike policemen, who stand at the main cornerrs in a sort of dejected manner and wave their hands spasmodically, first in one direction and then in the other. Rickshas machines and street cars wait impatiently sometimes while a Sike policeman settles dispute among some coolies, then, with a start wakes up and sends the held-up traffic on once again

Most machines don't seem capable of braking any speed laws. However there are some very honest to goodness machines on the streets, driver by chauffeurs and they for the most part are observant of the speed laws, or, at least, they watch the movements of other cars so as to avoid a collision

Gasoline sells for a dollar a gallon, China money, or about fifty cents in gold. However, you can hire an automobile all day for $5, but why use an automobile when you can have a rickshaw for fifty cents a day and be carried some where between ten and twelve miles an hour.

Altogether, motoring in the Orient isn't a very comfortable sport, though most of the well paid foreigners own automobiles or "motors" as they say over there. If you drive outside of the cities and have a breakdown, then your troubles begin for there are not many garages in that country. In fact the only place cars are used is in a short radius of the larger towns.

FIRST FORTNIGHTLY CROP REPORTS FOR PROVINCE

Issued by Department of Agriculture, Government of Alberta, Edmonton April 11 1925 .

Work on the land in preparation for the 1925 crop is now fairly general throughout the province. Farmers in the southern portions of the province were able this year to obtain an unusually early start an the land, and operations in most districts of the south have been in full swing for a week, with seeding in progress at a few points. In the central and northern districts the start has been somewhat later, but work will be general within the coming week in these districts and seeding will also start at a few points next week. Spring operations this year are fully two weeks earlier than last year, when work on the land did not commence until the latter part of April.

Throughout the entire province soil conditions are reported to be very satisfactory. The heavy snows of the past winter ran off gradually and the land received considerable benefit from the moisture, with the result that practically all districts have sufficient moisture to germinate the new crop. The report form sufficient moisture to germinate the new crop. The report from the south-eastern district is that the land is better supplied with moisture than for some years.

Present indications are for very little increase in wheat acreage this season. In the south-eastern districts surrounding Lethbridge, the farmers are giving their attention to the planting of sugar beets in preparation for the operation of the new sugar beet factory, and there are now upwards of 6000 acres ready for this crop. Greater attention is also being given through out the south to corn production, and the acreage of this crop will show a considerable increase over last year In the wheat acreage to any great extent.

There is a brisk demand for farm labor, but thus far the employment bureaus have been able to keep peace with this demand.

Livestock on the farms in the south eastern part of the province is in rather poor shape, but seems to have survived the winter fairly well in most other districts. The prospects for pasture stock are good her mind. It was a wonderful thought. It thrilled her to the depth of her wild, barbaric soul. It sent a glow into her eyes and a deeper flush of excitement into her cheeks and lips.

As she quested the ragged edges of the little meadow for signs of the dog pup, her thoughts flashed back swiftly. Two years ago they had buried her princess mother under the tall spruce near their cabin. That day Pierrot's sun had set for all time, and her own life was filled with a vast loneliness. There had been three at the graveside that afternoon as the sun went down—Pierrot, herself, and a dog a great powerful husky with a white star on his breast and a white-tipped ear. He had been her dead mother's pet from puppyhood—her body-guard with her always, even with his head resting on the side of her bed as she died. And that night, the night of the day they buried her the dog had disappeared. He had gone as quietly and as completely as her spirit. No one ever saw him after that. It was strange, and to Pierrot it was a miracle. Deep in his heart he was filled with the wonderful conviction that the dog had gone with his beloved Wyola into heaven.

"The blessed saints be praised!" sobbed Pierrot, falling on his knees at her side."

But Nepeese had spent three winters at the Missioner's school at Nelson House. She had learned a great deal about white people and the real God and she knew that Pierrot's thought was impossible. She believed that her mother's husky was either dead or had joined the wolves. Probably he had gone to the wolves. So—was it not possible that this youngster she and her father had pursued was the flesh and blood of her mother's pet? It was more than possible.

Baree had not moved an inch from under his rock. He lay like a thing stunned, his eyes fixed steadily on the scene of the tragedy out in the meadow.

Baree wanted to approach. It was like an invisible string tugging at his very hear. It was Kazan, and not Gray Wolf, calling to him back through the centuries, a "call" that was as old as the Egyptian pyramids and perhaps ten thousand years older. But against that desire Gray Wolf was pulling from out the black ages of the forests. The wolf held him quiet and motionless. Nepeese was looking about her. She was smiling. For a moment her face was turned toward him, and he saw the white shine of her teeth, and her beautiful eyes seemed glowing straight at him.

And then, suddenly, she dropped on her knees and peered under the rock.

Their eyes met. For at least half a minute there was not a sound Nepeese did not move, and her breath came so softly that Baree could not hear it.

Then she said, almost in a whisper "Baree! Baree! Upi Baree!"

It was the first time Baree had heard his name, and there was something so soft and assuring in the sound of it that in spite of himself the dog in him responded to it in a whimper that just reached the Willow's ears. Slowly she stretched in an arm. It was bare and round and soft. He might have darted forward the length of his body and buried his fangs in it easily. But some thing held him back. He knew that it was not an enemy; he knew that the dark eyes shining at him so wonderfully were not filled with the desire to harm—and the voice that came to him softly was like a strange and thrilling music.

"Baree! Baree! Upi Baree!

Over and over again the Willow called to him like that, while on her face she tried to draw herself a few inches farther under the rock. She could not reach him. There was still a foot between her hand and Baree and she would not call him. She made inch more. And then she saw where on the other side of the rock there was a stone. If she had removed the stone and come in that way—

She drew herself out and stood once more in the sunshine. Her heart thrilled. Pierrot was busy over his bear—an dshe would not call him. She made an effort to move the stone which closed in the hollow under the big boulder, but it was wedged in tightly. Then she began digging with a stick.

Five minutes—and Nepeese could move the stone. She tugged at it, inch by inch she dragged it out until at last it lay at her feet and the opening was ready for her body. She looked again toward Pierrot. He was still busy, and she laughed softly as she untied a big red-and-white Bay handkerchief from from about her shoulders. With this she would secure Baree. She dropped on her hands and knees and then lowered herself flat on the ground and began crawling into the hollow under the boulder.

Baree had moved. With the back of his head flattened against the rock he heard something which Nepeese had not heard he had felt a slow and growing pressure, and from this pressure he had dragged himself slowly—and the pressure still followed. The mass of rock was settling! Nepeese did not see or hear or understand. She was calling to him more and more pleadingly.

"Baree—Baree—Baree"

Her head and shoulders and both arms were under the rock now. The glow of her eyes was very close to Baree. He whined. The thrill of a great and impending danger stirred in his blood. And then—

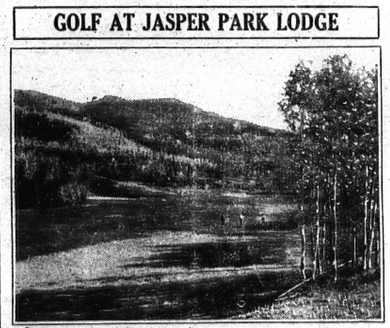

In that moment Nepeese felt the pressure of the rock on her shoulder, and into the eyes that had been glowing softly at Baree there shot a sudden wild look of horror. And then there came from her lips a cry that was not like any other sound Baree had ever heard in the wildnerness—wild, piercing, filled with agonized fear. Pierrot did not hear that first cry. But he hear the second and the third—and then scream after scream as the Willow's tender body was slowly crushed under the settling mass. He ran toward it with the speed of the wind. The cries were weaker—dying away. He saw Baree as he came out from under the rock and ran into the chasm, and in the same instant he saw a part of he Willow's dress and her moccasined feet. The rest of her was hidden under the death trap. Like a madman Pierrot began digging. When a few moments later he drew Nepeese out from under the boulder she was white and deathly still. Her eyes were closed. His hand could not feel that she was living, and a great moan of anguish rose out of his soul. But he knew how to fight for a life. He tore open her dress and found that she was not crushed as he had feared. Then he ran for water. When he returned, the Willow's eyes were open and she was gaspling for breath.

"The blessed saints be praised!" sobbed Pierrot, falling on his knees at her side. "Nepeese, ma Nepeese!"

GOLF AT JASPER PARK LODGE

WHEN it was decided to add golf to the allurements of Jasper National Park it was quite rightly conceded that the setting, as well as the importance of the place in the Canadian National tourist traffic plans, justified a course built to the highest standards. The policy adopted from the outset was that the golf should be good enough to be appreciated for itself, the beauty of the scenery being merely an added attraction. Since the course has been cleared and is revealed to the visitor he concludes that the railway was fortunate to have such a great extent of golfing terrain so immediately available to the Lodge. A year ago, when most of it was Rocky Mountain forest, the golfing possibilities were not so apparent. Work was commenced early in the summer of 1924 and was rushed forward with such success that nine holes will be available for play during the summer of 1925.

Fortunately there is no clay at Jasper. This should delight the golfer's heart. The underlying strata is generally gravel like all the Athabaska River basin in which Jasper is situated, so that the fairways have under them that gravelly subsoil essential to the production of good golfing turf. Sand was also found on the property in sufficient quantity and quality to fill all requirements. The fairways are clear of actual outcroppings of rock, but these show up around tees and greens, giving a pleasing rugged setting but never interfering with the play.

The route selected encloses a great heart shaped area with the first hole starting and the last hole finishing at the lower point of the heart, and at the top there is a double back and further along a loop of three holes which are on a peninsula running out into Lac Beauvert. This route is quite an exceptional one and there is a complete absence of paralleling in the ordinary sense of the term, although the 10th has the 6th immediately to the right of it.

The ups and downs of holes and the undulations of fairways are only those to be desired on a first class course located in a good golfing country. With such magnificent surroundings it naturally added much to the scenic attractions of the course to have such a route selected that gives different views at almost every hole.

A feature of the layout at Jasper is that there are no holes of a length which is more than one shot and yet not quite two.

Arrangements for play can be made at Jasper Park Lodge. A professional will be in attendance.

Double-Duty Cash Register

In a country hardware store a small radio department was opened and a partition erected to separate this section from the rest of the store. As the owner did not feel justified in purchasing a separate cash register for the new department, he devised the plan illustrated, which made it possible to use one cash register on both sides of the partition. A square section, a little higher and wider than the cash register, was cut out of the partition and the opening finished with casing. The bottom of the opening was desk-high, and a wooden panel was fitted loosely in this opening. A semi-circular shelf was fitted to the panel at the bottom and was supported by two iron-rod braces, as indicated, and a peep-hole, about 2 in. in diameter, was cut through the panel just above the top of the register. This allowed a clerk on one side to see whether or not a clerk on the other side was using the register. A hole was drilled in the center of the bottom casing to hold a socket for a strong pivot bolt, which was welded to a metal bracket, screwed to the panel and shelf as indicated in the detail. This permitted the panel to be swung around freely. It is a good idea to fit a bolt also in the upper casing to give the arrangement greater stability and permit it to be turned more easily.

Correct Grid Leak in Your Radio Set Is Important

One of the smallest parts that enters into the construction of a radio receiver is the grid leak, and in connection with it the grid condenser. As usual with small details they are given little attention. It will surprise many to know that the volume and clarity of reception depend on the correct value of the grid leak and the grid condenser. The grid current is determined by the number of negative electrons that are attracted to the grid from the filament. The negative charge on the grid sometimes piles up to a point where it practically stops the flow of plate current; the grid leak relieves this situation and frees the imprisoned electrons, preventing the tube from choking. This requires a grid leak of correct value for the tube used.

The grid leaks now on the market vary in efficiency; some are correct in value according to their rating, others nearly so, and many are found to be inefficient. When selecting the materials for building your set, always demand the best; this applies especially to grid leaks and grid condensers. Substituting different grid leaks of various resistances in your receiver will often be the means of improving volume and clarity of reception.

Each type of tube requires a different type of grid leak and grid condenser. The values of these parts are usually supplied by the manufacturer of the tube, and will be found in the literature accompanying the tube when purchased. A good variable grid leak is recommended by some authorities; another plan is to have several fixed grid leaks varying in value from one to five megohms and you will be able to select the best one on trial.

The variable grid leak is a valuable instrument—if the average user would be content to let it alone once it is adjusted to the best value for the particular tube he is using. Once the leak is properly adjusted it should not be touched unless the tube is changed.

To write black on glass or bright metal, use a mixture of water glass (silicate of soda), 1 to 2 parts, and liquid india ink, 10 parts. Clean the surface to be written upon and use a steel pen.

Washing the Car Chassis

More mud and dirt collects under the body on the chassis than anywhere else on the car. A simple and efficient method of removing this is to use a stationary sprinkler of the kind shown in the drawing, provided water under pressure is available. It can be installed in any garage having a concrete floor and good drainage, and consists of two lengths of ½-in. water pipe, perforated with a number of small holes. The pipes are arranged along the side of the garage and connected to the water supply. The distance between the pipes should be a little greater than the tread of the car so that the spray will strike the underside of the chassis. Thus the water will reach parts that are nearly inaccessible when using a hose.

Cathedral Saved by Diver Working Years in Dark

One of the most heroic accomplishments in the annals of engineering has come to light in the account of a diver who, working single-handed and in almost complete darkness, saved Winchester cathedral in England by renewing its foundations. The task consumed most of five and one-half years and was performed several feet below the surface, in slimy soil and water. The building was foundering because it rested only on an eight-foot layer of wet peat. The diver removed this material in sections, substituting concrete which he himself brought down and laid on a firm stratum of gravel, flint and chalk below the peat formation.

Here and There

Shipments of grain from Vancouver for the 1923-24 season have now passed the 41,000,000 bushel mark. Officials estimate that the 50,000,000 bushel mark set for the season will be surpassed in the near future.

Reports from England state that it has been universally conceded that Canada's pavilion was in the best condition when the King opened the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley on April 23rd. "It was the Canadian building," the reports said, "spick and span and completed to the last nail that led all others in the race to the finish in time for to-day's official opening."

Over 3,000 settlers left Liverpool for Canada on April 24th. Thirteen hundred of these sailed on the Canadian Pacific liner "Montcalm," including a party of 200 skilled workers from Manchester, 38 belonging to engineering trades, 40 to building trades and 42 farm hands. Eighty skilled workers from Leeds and a party of engineers from Barrow-in-Furness were also on board.

A total of 40,000,000 salmon trout eggs has been collected dering the last season by the Department of Marine and Fisheries in Lake Huron, Georgian Bay and Lake Superior. The total number obtained compares favorably with the average collections of recent years and is sufficient to fill all the hatcheries on the Great Lakes engaged in the propagation of salmon trout.

Graphic and interesting educational motion pictures will bring Alberta's various resources to the eyes of those who attend the British Empire Exhibition this year. In addition to pictures illustrating the life of Alberta's citizens on the farms, on the ranches and in the mining districts, charts will be used to bring out interesting compilations of statistics illustrative of the province's agricultural and industrial output.

Carrying an invitation to the President of the United States to attend the celebrations of the 140th anniversary of the settlement of Upper Canada by the United Empire Loyalists, which will be held in June, Miss G. Lazier, herself a descendant of the Loyalists, left Belleville recently on horseback to ride to Washington alone, a distance of 600 miles. Elaborate arrangements for the celebrations are being made and it is expected that thousands of visitors will attend.

An attractive booklet entitled, "A Week in Quebec in the Spring," by Betty Thornley, internationally known writer associated with "Vogue" and other magazines, has just been added to the series of artistic pamphlets published by the Canadian Pacific Railway. It describes the Ancient Capital and its environs, is illustrated by many striking photographs and bound in a cover which reproduces in natural colors the pattern of cloth called catalogne, woven by Quebec habitant women.

That the Indian village of Hochelaga, which stood on the site of the present city of Montreal, was a place of about fifty wooden houses having a population of 35me 4,000 souls when Jacques Cartier sailed up the St. Lawrence, was the assertion made by Dr. W. D. Lighthall before the Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal recently. Dr. Lighthall was able to give the boundaries of the village and described it as resembling the home of Cedric the Saxon, in "Ivanhoe."
